“ I don't know if anyone will read this as I only just now noticed that John had passed, but I wanted to share that I met John in my very first job when I was 16 (22 years ago) at Basil Griffin Park in Bowling Green. Initially I was somewhat frightened of him because he had such a control over everything he did that for a 16 year old it was very intimidating. However, John became a mentor of sorts for me, and even now I think about him somewhat regularly, and even have "what would John do?" moments. I've never met someone who was more real. He taught me to have skepticism when needed, to push through work when it has to be done, to see people for what they are, to push back when I need to push back. I give John credit for much of my success in life.
